Furness Tradition Festival

9th July

Crook Morris had a great day dancing at Furness Tradition festival in Ulverston on Saturday. Crook normally dance on both days of the festival, however due to dancer's other commitments we were only able to get a side and musicians together for the Saturday. We had a fantastic time of it though and the weather was glorious, if anything a little too hot for dancing! We started off the day, by leading the procession from the Coronation Hall to the top of the market place. Only a short procession, but that was fortunate in the hot weather! We then had several dance spots throughout the day which we shared with other teams. We had only been allotted 10 minutes at each spot, but it became apparent quite early on that as the spots were so spread out in time but very close together in location we could actually do more dances than planned. Which of course, we rose to the occasion of doing. Our new fool Dave (Well we've always known him as a fool, but he's now officially Crook's fool) looked fantastic in his green man outfit and did a splendid job in his debut outing in this role. He took to it very naturally and everyone thought he had made a great job with his costume.
